

Flat Week

Mortgage rates moved modestly lower this week, declining from 6.19% to 6.16%. The Federal Reserve meeting had little impact on mortgage pricing, as both the rate decision and overall tone were widely anticipated by markets. With no meaningful policy surprises or shifts in guidance, mortgage rates spent most of the week in a narrow range.

 Mortgage rates moved slightly lower this week to 6.16%. The Fed meeting came and went with little impact, as markets had largely priced in the decision, keeping rates relatively stable.

JUL 17 Next week is jobs week